Camera Raw (It's Not All Raw) Camera Raw is a free image processing plug-in that can be downloaded from Adobe's website. It replaces the far older raw conversion option that used to live with the Adobe _Capture_ and _Photoshop_ plug-ins. Although Camera Raw has a lot of the same capabilities, it emphasizes the process of _un-rawing_ an image. Camera Raw can analyze raw files, such as those from a camera, and output a new, properly processed image. It doesn't make sense to use Camera Raw on a raw file or an image that has already been processed.

Q: Physics projectile motion equation and Chebyshev T-F inequality I am trying to solve the projectile problem using the equation $a*(cos\theta*\omega) = g(t)$. My question is why do we use $\theta = cos^{ -1}(1/2)$ instead of $\theta = arcsin(1/2)$? I know that $cos^{ -1}(1/2) \ge \frac{\pi}{4}$ using Chebyshev's inequality. I have recently been introduced to the concept of a 'fundamental diagram' (or frontier diagram) and Chebyshev's Inequality. A standard fundamental diagram is of the form $y = a*x + b$. I know that in order for the interval to remain bounded, the slope of the curve must be less than 1. But what does this have to do with the projectile problem and Chebyshev's inequality? I have seen that $y = m*x + k$, where m is the slope of the curve and k is the y-intercept of the curve. The Chebyshev inequality in that context is $P(a
