Photoshop's interface is more than just a nice-looking program; it has a lot of functionality under the surface. For those of you not familiar with Photoshop, the interface consists of features like layers, adjustment layers, masks, channels, selections, image-editing tools, and even a snapping system that enables you to easily align the interface with your image. You can learn more about each of these features in the upcoming sections. Photoshop has four basic windows that you can manipulate with. The primary window shows the image that you're working on. The death of a kitten from head trauma at the weekend has sparked a debate on whether electric fences can damage a cat's hearing. Police say a young tabby was caught in a strong electric fence and took a fatal blow to the side of its head as it tried to escape. It was euthanised on Sunday, although it is not known whether it had been recaptured before then or suffered until it died of its wounds. A neighbour who could not bear to look at the scene and who did not want to be named, said she was shocked that the fence was not only powered by a 120 volt current, but had two metre long wires. "It's normal for us to walk the dogs [in the garden] using an ordinary lead, so it didn't seem fair. But you can't blame the man who installed it because we asked him to put it all together properly," she said. "It's fine for our guinea pigs but not our cats. It's distressing to see [the kitten], as it was injured." Hayley Kitchen, an animal behaviourist, said the current could be strong enough to cause a big change in the hearing of young animals and that rescuers should tread carefully when using a 120 volt fence. "If they blow the eardrum it can affect a lot of things, including fear reactions," she said. "Eardrum damage can result in diminished hearing, but it can also result in the loss of hearing completely. "This is a big deal because if cats don't hear things the whole world is going to be yelling at them, it could become a problem if a house cat is suddenly released into the wild." Ms Kitchen said that similar cases involving dogs and their owners have been reported. It is now illegal in Victoria to put electric fences higher than 100 volts - and the state's only legal fence design has a limit of 400 volts and a one metre radius. But there are still many homes and businesses in South Australia without a legal fence. Ms Kitchen said the average fence is about the same voltage as the 120 volt and she questions whether in this case the current was stronger.

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an optical pickup apparatus, and more particularly to an optical pickup apparatus for recording information on a recording medium using a light beam. 2. Description of the Related Art A conventional method for recording an optical recording medium uses a pickup head having a light source. The pickup head has three functions of light emission, light reception, and modulation of a light beam. For example, the pickup head records an information signal and an address signal on a disk-type optical recording medium (hereinafter, called a disk) by radiating a light beam to the disk and scanning the disk while modulating the light beam radiated from the light source. The pickup head may also reproduce a previously recorded information signal from the disk. When the pickup head is separated from the disk, the pickup head emits a focus error signal and a tracking error signal based on the light reflection and the light reception. The pickup head modulates the light beam while scanning the disk. For example, the pickup head irradiates the light beam to the disk, receives the light beam reflected from the disk, and converts the light beam reflected from the disk into an electric signal. In the conventional art, it is difficult to reduce the size of the pickup head because the pickup head includes the light source, the light reception device, and the
